CHAPTER 1
INTRODUCTION

Film making is a creative form of visual communication that combines storytelling, acting, cinematography, sound, lighting and editing to communicate an idea or experience to an audience. A short film presents a complete emotional situation within a limited duration, so every scene must contribute to the central idea. Radio podcasting, on the other hand, communicates a story through narration, dialogue, ambience, music, sound effects and silence. Both forms depend on clear planning and effective storytelling.

The project developed for the Film Making and Radio Podcasting course (CD23731) is a five-minute short film titled “RESUME”. The screenplay centres on two characters, Anu and Bhavya, whose friendship is shown through ordinary places, familiar routines and the physical absence of one friend from spaces they once shared.

The story begins with Anu getting ready in the morning and receiving a message from Bhavya. When the conversation stops, the film moves through a neighbourhood park and a small café where Anu repeatedly encounters an empty space that reminds her of Bhavya. A later phone call reveals that Bhavya is away but still emotionally connected to their shared memories.

The film reaches its emotional resolution when Bhavya says she is coming home the following week. At the park one week later, Bhavya finally sits beside Anu, replacing the earlier empty space. The screenplay uses the empty chair as a simple visual idea for absence, memory, friendship and reunion.

CHAPTER 2
PROJECT OVERVIEW

RESUME is a short film screenplay with a runtime of approximately five minutes. It uses a small cast, a limited number of locations and everyday objects to build an emotional story about friendship and distance. The screenplay avoids a large external conflict and instead develops its meaning through repeated places, familiar conversations and the gradual movement from absence to reunion.

The two central characters are Anu and Bhavya. Their relationship is established through an old photograph, a friendship bracelet, shared café habits, a familiar park bench and a terrace where they spent time growing up. These objects and locations allow the audience to understand their history without requiring long exposition.

The screenplay contains six numbered scenes. The first introduces Anu alone in her bedroom. The second places her in the neighbourhood park, where she sits on one end of a bench and leaves the other side empty. The third moves to their usual café table. The fourth briefly shifts to Bhavya's room and reveals that Bhavya also keeps their memories. The fifth takes place on the terrace and confirms Bhavya's return. The final scene brings both friends together at the park.

The production is intentionally simple. The emotional effect comes from framing, pauses, phone communication, silence, repeated spaces and the contrast between an empty place and the final reunion. The screenplay therefore provides a practical exercise in visual storytelling, performance, continuity, sound and editing.

CHAPTER 3
TITLE – RESUME

3.1 Meaning of the Title

The project title used in this report is “RESUME”. The title connects directly with the story's movement from separation to continuation: the friendship that appears paused is given an opportunity to resume when Bhavya returns.

3.2 Title and Story Connection

The word “RESUME” reflects the final movement of the screenplay. Anu and Bhavya are not shown rebuilding their friendship from nothing. Instead, their familiar conversations and shared places remain part of their relationship even while they are apart. Their final meeting at the park allows the relationship to continue from where it was left.

The empty chair is an important visual motif inside the story, but it is not the title used in this report. The empty space beside Anu appears at the park, the café and the terrace. It represents the physical absence of Bhavya while also suggesting that the friendship remains emotionally present.

3.3 Central Idea

The central idea of RESUME is that meaningful friendship can survive distance. The screenplay presents this idea quietly rather than through a dramatic conflict. Messages, phone calls, photographs and familiar locations show that both characters remember the relationship. The final image of the two friends sitting together completes the visual movement from absence to presence.

GENRE

RESUME can be described as an Emotional Drama and Friendship-based Short Film. The screenplay focuses on the emotional experience of two friends separated by distance and the anticipation of their reunion. The story is driven by small interactions rather than action, suspense or an external antagonist.

4.1 Emotional Drama

The emotional element comes from Anu's repeated encounters with spaces associated with Bhavya. The empty side of the park bench, the unused chair at the café and the second chair on the terrace visually communicate absence. The phone conversations add emotional information without requiring a lengthy explanation of their situation.

4.2 Friendship Drama

Friendship is the central relationship in the screenplay. The old photograph, bracelet, café receipt and familiar ordering habit establish a shared past. The dialogue is casual and natural, which makes the final admission “I missed you” feel like a continuation of an existing bond rather than a sudden change in the story.

4.3 Short Film

With a stated runtime of five minutes, the screenplay uses a compact structure. Six scenes are enough to establish the relationship, show separation, develop anticipation and deliver the reunion. The limited runtime encourages visual economy and concise dialogue.

The major elements that drive the film are:

- Friendship and emotional connection
- Absence and distance
- Shared memories
- Familiar places and routines
- Phone communication
- Anticipation of reunion
- The movement from an empty space to togetherness

CHAPTER 5
OBJECTIVES

The main objective of RESUME is to create a short, emotionally engaging film using simple visual storytelling and a small number of characters and locations. The screenplay demonstrates how an everyday friendship can be communicated through repeated visual motifs, natural dialogue and controlled pacing.

The specific objectives are:

- To establish a believable friendship between Anu and Bhavya within a short runtime.
- To communicate emotional distance without depending on a large dramatic event.
- To use recurring locations such as the park, café and terrace to represent shared memories.
- To use an empty chair or empty space as a visual representation of absence.
- To use photographs, a bracelet and a café receipt as memory-based props.
- To show how phone messages and calls can maintain emotional connection across distance.
- To develop a clear beginning, middle and resolution within six scenes.
- To use silence and pauses to allow emotional moments to settle.
- To create a final reunion that visually resolves the earlier empty space.
- To demonstrate practical film-making skills in framing, continuity, performance, sound and editing.
- To understand how a short screenplay can communicate a complete emotional idea with minimal dialogue.
- To provide a screenplay that can also be interpreted through an audio or podcast adaptation.

CHAPTER 6
STORY DEVELOPMENT

The story of RESUME develops from a simple visual question: what does an ordinary place feel like when the person who once shared it with you is no longer there? The screenplay answers this through Anu's movement between familiar spaces and her continuing communication with Bhavya.

6.1 Establishing the Friendship

The opening scene establishes that Anu and Bhavya have an existing friendship. Their old photograph and friendship bracelet are placed among Anu's college notes, immediately connecting the present to their shared past. Bhavya's casual morning message further establishes familiarity through the line “Morning, idiot.”

6.2 Developing Absence

The park scene introduces the strongest visual motif. Anu sits at one end of the worn bench and deliberately leaves the other side empty. An old photograph shows that the same bench was previously shared by the two friends. The visual contrast makes the absence understandable without a separate explanation.

6.3 Shared Memory Through Routine

At the café, Anu sits at their usual two-person table and receives only one coffee. The phone conversation recalls how they used to order and share the same drink. The scene uses an ordinary habit to communicate the depth of their friendship.

6.4 Movement Toward Reunion

The story then gives the audience Bhavya's perspective. She finds their old photograph and café receipt and almost sends messages expressing that she misses Anu. On the terrace, she finally tells Anu that she is coming home next week. The story therefore moves from silent absence to direct confirmation of return.

CHAPTER 7
STORY SYNOPSIS

7.1 Beginning

Anu begins her morning in her bedroom. College notes, photographs and an old friendship bracelet are visible on the desk. An old photograph shows Anu and Bhavya laughing together. Anu receives a morning message from Bhavya, replies, and then waits when no further reply arrives.

7.2 Park

In the evening, Anu goes to the neighbourhood park and sits on one end of a worn wooden bench, deliberately leaving the other side empty. She looks at old photographs and finds one showing herself and Bhavya on that same bench. A message from Bhavya asks how life is. Anu answers “Same old,” looks toward the empty space and sends the message. Bhavya replies, “Lucky.”

7.3 Café

At a small neighbourhood café, Anu sits at their usual two-person table. The waiter places one coffee in front of her. During a phone call, Bhavya remembers that Anu always ordered the same thing, while Anu remembers that Bhavya always stole half of it. They laugh, then Bhavya ends the call because she has class.

7.4 Bhavya's Room

At night, Bhavya opens an old drawer containing their friendship bracelet, an old café receipt and a faded photograph. She types messages expressing that she misses Anu and asking when she is coming home, but deletes both before sending them. This scene shows that the distance affects Bhavya as well.

7.5 Terrace

At sunset, Anu sits on one of two old plastic chairs on the terrace where they grew up. Bhavya calls. After some casual conversation, Bhavya says that she is coming home next week. They decide that they will meet at the café, the park and the terrace. When Anu asks whether Bhavya's chair is still there, she replies that she never moved it.

7.6 Emotional Resolution

Anu finally says, “I missed you.” Bhavya answers, “I missed you too.” The scene avoids an exaggerated reaction. They simply remain on the call while the sun sets. The restraint keeps the emotional tone consistent with the rest of the screenplay.

7.7 Reunion

One week later, Anu sits at the familiar park bench with two coffees beside her. Bhavya arrives and sits in the previously empty space. Anu tells her that she is late, and Bhavya replies that she is only eight minutes late. They laugh, take their coffees and sit together. The final image makes the central visual idea complete: the old empty space is no longer empty.

CHAPTER 8
CHARACTERS

RESUME has two central characters: Anu and Bhavya. The screenplay does not introduce a large supporting cast. This limited character structure keeps the focus on the friendship and allows small details in dialogue and props to carry emotional meaning.

8.1 Anu

Anu is the main viewpoint character of the screenplay. She is shown getting ready in the morning, visiting the park, sitting at the café, spending time on the terrace and waiting for Bhavya's return. Her actions are generally quiet, allowing the audience to understand her feelings through where she sits, what she looks at and how she responds to Bhavya's messages.

Anu's connection to Bhavya is visible through the old photograph, friendship bracelet, familiar café routine and the chair she never moved. She does not make a dramatic declaration until the terrace scene, where she finally says that she missed Bhavya.

8.2 Bhavya

Bhavya is Anu's close friend and the second central character. Although she is physically absent from the early scenes, her presence is maintained through messages and phone calls. Her dialogue is casual and familiar, showing that the friendship continues despite the distance.

The scene in Bhavya's room provides an important parallel to Anu's experience. Bhavya keeps the same kinds of memories—photographs, the friendship bracelet and a café receipt—and privately considers sending emotional messages. Her decision to return home becomes the turning point that leads to the reunion.

8.3 Relationship

The relationship between the characters is built through shared habits rather than long explanations. Their teasing, laughter, familiar café order and simple plans to meet demonstrate a friendship that already has history.

CHAPTER 9
SCENE DEVELOPMENT

The screenplay contains six numbered scenes. Each scene contributes a specific step in the movement from absence to reunion. The following development follows the screenplay directly and does not add scenes that are not present in it.

9.1 Scene 1 – Anu's Bedroom, Morning

Location: Anu's bedroom. Time: Morning. Characters: Anu and Bhavya through phone communication. Anu prepares for the day in a lived-in room containing college notes, photographs and an old friendship bracelet. An old photograph shows Anu and Bhavya laughing together. Her phone buzzes and Bhavya sends a casual morning message. Anu replies and waits when no further response comes.

Emotional purpose: Introduces the friendship and establishes that Bhavya is not physically present. Cinematic approach: Use close-ups of the photograph, bracelet and phone, followed by medium shots of Anu getting ready. The pause after the unanswered message should be allowed to remain visible.

9.2 Scene 2 – Neighbourhood Park, Evening

Location: Neighbourhood park. Time: Evening. Characters: Anu and Bhavya through messages. Anu sits on one end of a worn wooden bench, leaving the other side empty. She looks through old photographs and finds one showing the two friends on the same bench.

Emotional purpose: Establishes the empty space as the film's recurring visual motif. Cinematic approach: Frame Anu and the empty side of the bench together. Cut to the old photograph so that the audience can compare the shared past with the present. A phone buzz then brings Bhavya's message into the scene.

CHAPTER 9
SCENE DEVELOPMENT

9.3 Scene 3 – Small Neighbourhood Café, Afternoon

Location: Small neighbourhood café. Time: Afternoon. Characters: Anu and Bhavya through a phone call. The café contains two outdoor tables, string lights and a chalkboard menu. Anu sits at their usual two-person table. The waiter places one coffee in front of her. She looks at the empty chair.

The phone call turns a physical absence into an active conversation. Bhavya remembers Anu's usual order and Anu remembers how Bhavya used to steal half of it. Their laughter is followed by a small silence before Bhavya says she has class and ends the call.

Emotional purpose: Shows that distance has not erased the friendship. Cinematic approach: Establish the two-person table, isolate the single coffee, and use close-ups during the dialogue. The empty chair should remain visible when possible.

9.4 Scene 4 – Bhavya's Room, Night

Location: Bhavya's room. Time: Night. Character: Bhavya. Bhavya opens an old drawer and finds the friendship bracelet, old café receipt and faded photograph. She looks at Anu's chat and types two emotional messages but deletes them before sending.

Emotional purpose: Confirms that Bhavya also misses the friendship and carries shared memories. Cinematic approach: Use close-ups of the drawer, objects, photograph and phone screen. The deletion of the messages can be followed by a brief pause before she locks the phone.

CHAPTER 9
SCENE DEVELOPMENT

9.5 Scene 5 – Terrace, Sunset

Location: Terrace. Time: Sunset. Characters: Anu and Bhavya through a phone call. The terrace contains a low parapet wall, potted plants, a clothesline and two old plastic chairs. Anu sits in one chair when Bhavya calls.

The conversation begins casually. Bhavya then says she is coming home next week. They immediately begin referring to their familiar places: the café, the park and the terrace. Anu looks at the second chair and asks whether Bhavya still has her chair. Bhavya replies that Anu never moved it.

Emotional purpose: Converts the earlier absence into anticipation. Cinematic approach: Use the two chairs as the central composition. The sunset provides a natural transition toward the emotional line “I missed you.” Avoid an exaggerated reaction; the screenplay specifically keeps the response simple.

9.6 Scene 6 – Neighbourhood Park, Morning

Location: Neighbourhood park. Time: Morning, one week later. Characters: Anu and Bhavya. Anu waits at the familiar bench with two coffees. Bhavya arrives and sits in the previously empty space.

Emotional purpose: Completes the story visually. Cinematic approach: Begin with the familiar empty space, then reveal Bhavya entering the frame and occupying it. The short exchange about being eight minutes late provides a natural, light ending before the two friends sit together.

CHAPTER 9
SCENE DEVELOPMENT

9.7 Visual Continuity Across the Scenes

The six scenes are connected through repeated objects and locations. The photograph appears as evidence of the shared past. The park bench and café chair repeatedly show the physical absence of Bhavya. The terrace chairs then prepare the audience for the final park reunion.

9.8 Dialogue Development

Dialogue is deliberately brief. The screenplay relies on familiar speech such as “Morning, idiot,” “Same old,” the café exchange about sharing coffee, and the final conversation about being late. These lines create the feeling of a friendship that already exists rather than introducing it through exposition.

9.9 Emotional Progression

The emotional progression moves from uncertainty to recognition, then to confirmation and reunion. The unanswered message begins the feeling of distance. The park and café deepen the sense of absence. Bhavya's private scene confirms that she feels the same distance. The terrace call introduces hope, and the final park scene resolves it.

9.10 Visual Motif

The empty chair or empty side of a shared seat is the main visual motif. It is not used as a symbol of permanent loss; instead, it remains open for Bhavya's return. The final shot changes the meaning of the earlier images because the space is finally occupied.

CHAPTER 9
SCENE DEVELOPMENT

9.11 Performance Direction

The screenplay calls for restrained performance. Anu's emotions can be communicated through pauses, glances at photographs, the empty chair and the way she responds to messages. Bhavya's feelings are shown through the objects she keeps, the messages she deletes and the eventual statement that she is coming home.

9.12 Pacing

Because the stated runtime is five minutes, the scenes should be concise. The film should allow enough time for the important pauses while avoiding unnecessary coverage that weakens the rhythm. The park, café and terrace scenes should each feel distinct while remaining part of the same emotional progression.

9.13 Transition Planning

Transitions can be built around phone sounds, movement, object close-ups and changes in location. The phone buzz in the opening, the park message, the café call, the silent deletion of Bhavya's messages, the terrace call and the final park arrival provide natural points for cuts.

9.14 Scene-to-Scene Continuity

Props and emotional details should remain consistent. The friendship bracelet, photographs, café receipt, two chairs and familiar bench should be treated as continuity elements. The final two coffees at the park should also be established clearly as a preparation for Bhavya's arrival.

CHAPTER 10
CLIMAX AND ENDING

The climax of RESUME is emotional rather than dramatic. The story does not depend on danger, conflict or a surprise revelation. Instead, the climax is created when Bhavya confirms that she is coming home and Anu finally expresses what she has been carrying quietly.

10.1 The Terrace Conversation

The terrace conversation is the emotional turning point. Bhavya says she is coming home next week. They name the café, park and terrace as places they will share again. Anu looks at the second chair and confirms that she never moved it. The chair therefore becomes a physical reminder that the friendship has been waiting rather than erased.

10.2 The Reunion

One week later, Anu waits with two coffees at the familiar park bench. Bhavya occupies the empty space. Their brief exchange about being eight minutes late restores the ordinary rhythm of their friendship.

10.3 Symbolic Significance

The ending does not portray a dramatic transformation. Instead, it shows continuity. The same bench that earlier represented absence now represents togetherness. The empty space has been filled by the person whose absence created it.

The final image is therefore a visual completion of the title RESUME: the relationship continues from the point at which it was paused.

CHAPTER 11
CINEMATOGRAPHY

Cinematography in RESUME should support the contrast between physical absence and emotional connection. The screenplay provides several clear opportunities for composition through the park bench, café table, terrace chairs and memory objects.

11.1 Framing Anu

Medium shots can establish Anu in her bedroom, park and café. Close-ups can isolate the photograph, bracelet, phone, coffee and her reactions. In the park and café, framing should retain the empty space beside her so that the absence remains visible.

11.2 Two-Person Space

The screenplay repeatedly establishes places designed for two people. The two-person café table and two terrace chairs can be framed symmetrically, with one side empty. At the final park scene, the same visual arrangement can be repeated after Bhavya arrives.

11.3 Memory Objects

Close-ups of the photograph, bracelet and café receipt help the audience understand the shared history without additional dialogue. These shots also provide natural cut points between character action and memory.

11.4 Final Composition

The final park composition should clearly show Anu and Bhavya together. The earlier empty side of the bench is no longer empty, creating a visual match with the beginning of the story.

Camera model, lens choice and stabilization equipment: Not specified in the screenplay.

CHAPTER 12
LIGHTING

The screenplay specifies different times of day that can naturally create visual variation. Lighting should remain consistent with those locations and times rather than introducing a visual style that is not required by the story.

12.1 Morning Bedroom

The opening bedroom scene takes place in the morning. Soft natural window light can establish an ordinary beginning to Anu's day while keeping the room's lived-in details visible.

12.2 Park and Café

The park scene takes place in the evening, while the café scene takes place in the afternoon. Natural or location-based lighting can distinguish the two settings without excessive artificial lighting.

12.3 Bhavya's Room

The fourth scene occurs at night. The lighting can be more contained so that the drawer, photograph, receipt and phone become visually important. The quieter lighting can support Bhavya's private moment without making it melodramatic.

12.4 Terrace and Final Park

The terrace scene is set at sunset, making the changing natural light part of the scene. The final park scene takes place in the morning, providing a brighter visual setting for the reunion.

The lighting approach should therefore follow the screenplay's time-of-day progression: morning, evening, afternoon, night, sunset and morning.

SOUND DESIGN

Sound is important in RESUME because several key events occur through phone communication. The screenplay itself identifies phone buzzes and calls, laughter, silence and environmental settings as useful sound moments.

13.1 Present-Day Sounds

The opening phone buzz establishes Bhavya's presence even though she is not physically in the room. In the park, another phone buzz introduces Bhavya's message. The café and terrace scenes use phone calls to connect the two locations.

13.2 Environmental Sounds

The park can use natural neighbourhood ambience. The café can use subtle environmental sound around the tables and waiter. Bhavya's room can be comparatively quiet so that the handling of the drawer and phone remains clear. The terrace can include natural outdoor ambience during sunset.

13.3 Silence

Silence is explicitly useful after the café conversation, during Bhavya's deleted messages, and after Anu says “I missed you.” The screenplay avoids filling every emotional moment with dialogue, so pauses should remain audible and intentional.

13.4 Dialogue and Phone Sound

Phone voices should remain clear while still sounding as if the characters are communicating through a device. The opening message, park message and three phone calls are important structural sound cues.

Music: The screenplay does not specify a particular music track or musical style. Any music used should therefore support the emotional tone without replacing the dialogue and natural pauses.

CHAPTER 14
EDITING TECHNIQUES

Editing in RESUME should emphasize repetition and contrast. The screenplay is short, so cuts need to be purposeful and should preserve the natural rhythm of the conversations.

14.1 Continuity Editing

Continuity editing can maintain the spatial relationships between Anu, the empty chair or bench space, the café table and the terrace chairs. Consistent screen direction and prop placement will help the audience follow the simple story without confusion.

14.2 Cutaways

Cutaways to photographs, the friendship bracelet, café receipt, phone screen and coffee can communicate information economically. These objects allow the film to show shared history without adding exposition.

14.3 Parallel Perspective

The screenplay briefly shifts from Anu to Bhavya in the fourth scene. This change of viewpoint is important because it demonstrates that both characters carry the friendship with them.

14.4 Pacing

The first five scenes should gradually build the emotional weight of the empty space and the final call. The sixth scene can then be comparatively simple and quick, allowing the reunion to feel natural.

14.5 Final Visual Edit

The final cut should preserve the visual relationship between the earlier empty bench and the final occupied bench. This repetition provides the film's clearest editing-based resolution.

Editing software used: Not specified in the screenplay.

CHAPTER 15
USE OF PROPS AND LOCATION

15.1 Props

The screenplay uses ordinary objects as emotional anchors. The important props are:

- College notes
- Photographs and a faded photograph
- Old friendship bracelet
- Mobile phone
- Café receipt
- Coffee cups
- Old drawer
- Two plastic chairs
- Worn wooden park bench
- Clothesline and potted plants on the terrace

The photograph and friendship bracelet establish the shared past. The café receipt connects the friends to a repeated routine. The two chairs and the two-person table create visual spaces that can be occupied or left empty. The two coffees in the final park scene prepare the audience for Bhavya's arrival.

15.2 Locations

- Anu's bedroom / home: introduces Anu and the friendship objects.
- Neighbourhood park: represents a familiar shared place and contains the recurring bench.
- Small neighbourhood café: represents their shared routine and two-person table.
- Bhavya's room: reveals Bhavya's private memories and distance.
- Terrace: represents a place they grew up on and becomes the setting for the decision to return.

The screenplay's opening location list identifies Anu's Home, Neighbourhood Park, Small Café and Terrace. Scene 4 separately identifies Bhavya's Room, so the production should account for that requirement during location planning.

CHAPTER 16
RADIO PODCAST ADAPTATION

The screenplay can be adapted into a radio podcast by replacing visual information with narration, dialogue, environmental sound and carefully timed silence. Since the original story relies heavily on empty spaces and objects, the audio version must describe those elements so that the listener can understand their emotional importance.

16.1 Film Element to Audio Element

- Anu's bedroom: room ambience, morning phone buzz and narrator description of the photograph and bracelet.
- Park bench: park ambience, footsteps, phone buzz and narration describing Anu sitting with an empty space beside her.
- Café: café ambience, waiter movement, one coffee being placed down and the phone conversation.
- Bhavya's room: drawer opening, handling of paper and objects, phone typing and the silence after deleted messages.
- Terrace: outdoor ambience, phone ring, conversation and sunset atmosphere.
- Final park: morning ambience, two coffees, footsteps or arrival sounds and the friends' final conversation.

The central visual motif can be communicated through narration. Instead of showing an empty chair, the narrator can describe Anu looking at the chair or the empty side of the bench. The final scene can then state that Bhavya sits beside her, allowing the listener to understand the change.

CHAPTER 17
RADIO PODCAST SCRIPT APPROACH

The podcast version should retain the six-scene structure of the screenplay. A narrator can establish locations and actions that cannot be seen, while Anu and Bhavya's voices carry the dialogue.

17.1 Opening

The narrator introduces a quiet morning in Anu's room. College notes, photographs and an old friendship bracelet are described through narration. A phone buzz is heard, followed by Bhavya's message and Anu's reply. The silence after the reply becomes the first indication of distance.

17.2 Middle

The park and café scenes can be separated through environmental sound. Park ambience introduces the bench and old photograph. Café ambience introduces the two-person table and the single coffee. The phone conversation can then be performed naturally.

17.3 Bhavya's Scene

The narrator describes Bhavya opening the drawer and finding the bracelet, café receipt and photograph. Typing and deletion sounds can replace the visual action of writing and removing the messages.

17.4 Ending

The terrace conversation should use outdoor ambience and a clear phone connection. The final park scene should begin with morning ambience and two cups being present. Bhavya's arrival can be represented through footsteps followed by her dialogue.

17.5 Audio Continuity

Recurring phone sounds, environmental ambience and pauses should help the listener recognize transitions between scenes. The audio version should not invent events beyond the screenplay; it should translate the existing actions into sound.

CHAPTER 18
VOICE AND AUDIO PERFORMANCE

Voice performance is important in the audio adaptation because the listener cannot rely on facial expressions or visual framing. The two characters should therefore have clearly distinguishable but natural voices.

18.1 Anu

Anu's voice can begin naturally and conversationally. Her emotional state should be communicated through small changes in pace, pauses and tone rather than exaggerated sadness. The line “I missed you” should be delivered simply because the screenplay specifies no dramatic reaction.

18.2 Bhavya

Bhavya's voice should retain the familiarity of a close friend. Her teasing in the opening and café conversation should sound casual. The terrace scene can become more sincere when she says that she is coming home and later that she missed Anu too.

18.3 Performance Elements

- Natural dialogue delivery
- Clear distinction between phone and direct sound
- Appropriate pauses
- Controlled emotional expression
- Realistic laughter
- Quiet handling of the deleted-message scene
- Clear pronunciation and intelligible phone dialogue
- Environmental sound that supports rather than overwhelms the voices

The screenplay does not specify particular microphones, recording software or audio equipment. Those technical choices should therefore be determined during production rather than presented as established facts in this report.

CHAPTER 19
PRODUCTION PROCESS

The production of RESUME can be organized into pre-production, production and post-production. The screenplay provides the story, scenes, characters and locations, while exact crew assignments, equipment and dates are not specified.

19.1 Pre-Production

- Finalize the five-minute screenplay titled RESUME.
- Plan the six scenes and their locations.
- Cast Anu and Bhavya.
- Prepare the friendship bracelet, photographs, café receipt, phones, coffee cups and two chairs.
- Plan continuity for the park bench, café table and terrace chairs.
- Plan the morning, evening, afternoon, night and sunset lighting requirements.
- Rehearse the phone conversations and final reunion.
- Plan framing for the recurring empty-space motif.

CHAPTER 19
PRODUCTION PROCESS

19.2 Production

- Shoot Anu's bedroom scene in the morning.
- Shoot the neighbourhood park scene in the evening.
- Shoot the café scene in the afternoon.
- Shoot Bhavya's room scene at night.
- Shoot the terrace scene during sunset.
- Shoot the final park reunion in the morning.
- Record clean dialogue and phone-call performances.
- Capture close-ups of the photographs, bracelet, receipt, coffee and chairs.
- Record useful environmental ambience at each location.

19.3 Post-Production

- Arrange the six scenes in screenplay order.
- Maintain continuity of props and locations.
- Use close-ups and cutaways to support the story.
- Balance dialogue with environmental sound and silence.
- Preserve the emotional pause after key lines.
- Ensure the final park shot clearly resolves the earlier empty space.
- Add titles and credits and export the completed five-minute film.

Exact editing software, camera equipment, crew details and production dates are not specified in the screenplay and are therefore not presented as confirmed project facts.

CHAPTER 20
CHALLENGES FACED

The screenplay identifies several practical areas that require attention during production. Since the source screenplay does not record which difficulties were actually experienced, the following are production considerations arising directly from the script.

- Maintaining continuity of the friendship bracelet, photographs, café receipt, coffee cups and chairs.
- Making the empty space beside Anu visually clear without overemphasizing it.
- Creating believable phone conversations while keeping the characters' emotional connection clear.
- Coordinating different times of day: morning, evening, afternoon, night and sunset.
- Finding suitable locations that match the bedroom, park, café and terrace descriptions.
- Keeping the café and park scenes visually consistent with the final reunion.
- Recording natural pauses and laughter without making the performances feel forced.
- Showing the final occupation of the empty space clearly enough to function as the visual resolution.
- Maintaining a concise five-minute runtime while preserving all six scenes.
- Recording clear audio in outdoor locations such as the park and terrace.

These considerations can be addressed through careful planning, continuity checks, rehearsal, location testing and organized editing.

CHAPTER 21
LEARNING OUTCOMES

The RESUME project provides practical learning opportunities in screenplay interpretation and short-film production. The main outcomes include:

- Understanding how a short screenplay can establish characters quickly.
- Developing visual storytelling through recurring objects and locations.
- Using composition to communicate physical absence.
- Planning scenes according to time of day and location.
- Directing natural dialogue and restrained emotional performance.
- Using close-ups to give importance to story objects.
- Maintaining continuity across repeated locations.
- Recording and balancing dialogue, phone sounds and environmental ambience.
- Using pauses and silence as storytelling elements.
- Editing a short film with a clear emotional progression.
- Adapting visual information into narration and sound for a podcast.
- Understanding how the same story can communicate meaning through both image and audio.

The project also demonstrates that a friendship story does not require a large number of characters or dramatic events. Small actions, familiar habits and repeated visual spaces can carry the emotional meaning of a short film.

CHAPTER 22
EXPECTED OUTCOME

The expected outcome of the project is a five-minute emotional short film titled RESUME based on the relationship between Anu and Bhavya. The completed film should preserve the screenplay's simple structure and emotional restraint.

The film is expected to:

- Introduce Anu and Bhavya as close friends through concise dialogue and visual details.
- Communicate the effect of physical distance through the repeated empty space beside Anu.
- Use photographs, a bracelet and a café receipt to establish shared memories.
- Maintain a clear six-scene progression from separation to reunion.
- Use the park, café and terrace as recognizable shared spaces.
- Show that Bhavya also carries memories of the friendship.
- Build anticipation through the terrace phone call.
- Resolve the central visual motif when Bhavya sits beside Anu at the park.
- End with a natural, understated reunion rather than an exaggerated dramatic reaction.

The intended emotional response is recognition of the value of friendship and the feeling that meaningful relationships can continue even after a period of distance. The final image should leave the audience with a clear sense that what was paused can resume.

CHAPTER 23
CONCLUSION

The RESUME project demonstrates how a short film can communicate an emotional story through simple characters, familiar locations, ordinary objects and restrained dialogue. The screenplay follows Anu and Bhavya through a series of everyday moments that gradually reveal the importance of their friendship.

The central visual idea is the empty space left beside Anu. The same absence is repeated at the park, café and terrace, while photographs, a bracelet and a café receipt preserve the memory of the friendship. Bhavya's private scene confirms that the distance is shared by both characters.

The story reaches its emotional resolution when Bhavya says she is coming home and, one week later, sits beside Anu at the familiar park bench. The simple exchange about being late restores the ordinary rhythm of their friendship. The empty space is no longer empty, completing the visual progression of the film.

The title RESUME reflects this ending. The friendship is not presented as something that must be created again; it continues from where it was left. Through its six scenes, the screenplay demonstrates how visual motifs, natural dialogue, pauses, sound and continuity can create an emotionally complete short film within a five-minute runtime.

The screenplay can also be translated into a radio podcast by replacing visual information with narration, dialogue, environmental sound and silence. This provides an opportunity to explore how the same emotional idea can be communicated through a different medium.

Overall, RESUME is a compact film-making exercise centred on friendship, distance, memory and reunion. Its final image provides a simple but clear resolution: the place that was kept open for a friend is finally occupied again.

“I missed you.”
“I missed you too.”

The ending leaves the friendship ready to resume.
